Pederson Group gives money for fellowships

The Pederson Group Inc. Tuesday announced it will donate $25,000 for student fellowships to the Marvin Andrews Graduate Program in Urban Management in the Arizona State University School of Public Affairs.

The Phoenix-based retail-development company has worked closely with a number of city governments "and recognizes the importance of attracting, training and preparing talented individuals to enter the public sector," said Jim Pederson, founder and chairman of the 25-year-old company.

The Marvin Andrews program is a national fellowship in which students earn master's degrees in public administration.
